Employment

The John W. Draper Interdisciplinary Master's Program in Humanities and Social Thought invites applications for the following Assistant Professor/Faculty Fellow positions. Initial appointments will be for one year beginning September 1, 2014, and are renewable annually for a maximum of three years, pending budgetary and administrative approval.

Clinical Faculty Position in Digital Humanities

We invite applications for a clinical assistant or clinical associate professor in the area of Digital Humanities & Digital Scholarship, pending budgetary and administrative approval. The initial appointment begins September 2015 and is subject to renewal after three years. We seek an outstanding interdisciplinary scholar in the humanities or the humanistic social sciences who engages philosophies, methods, techniques, and problematics of contemporary digital scholarship and demonstrates a strong commitment to excellence in teaching. The successful applicant will possess a substantial record of research in his/her field as well as expertise in one or more of the following: data design, curation, and analysis; data visualization, translation, and archiving; collaborative project management; textual and linguistic analysis; digital pedagogy; and digital cultural ethnography. The person in this position will work closely with Draper Program faculty to integrate digital humanities into a high-quality interdisciplinary master's curriculum and will collaborate with faculty in other programs and departments to enhance NYU's presence in digital humanities. Other responsibilities include teaching two courses a semester, advising master's students, supervising theses and thesis equivalents, and contributing to a planned online research portal in digital humanities.

Applications can be submitted here. Please upload letter of application, cv, dissertation or book précis, descriptions of potential digital humanities courses, and three references by December 15, 2014.

NYU is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer.
